

How to boost your income with these options

The search for higher investment income has never been more dire than in recent years. Inflation is eroding people's purchasing power, investment returns and dividends. Meanwhile, bank deposit rates have not risen high enough to outpace the inflation rate, resulting in a low to negative real interest rate environment.

Cash may not be king after all

Parking your cash savings in a bank deposit may simply not be enough in today's investment environment. (See "Cash is king?")

We discuss why having higher income is critical in current times and explain how to increase your income with these options.

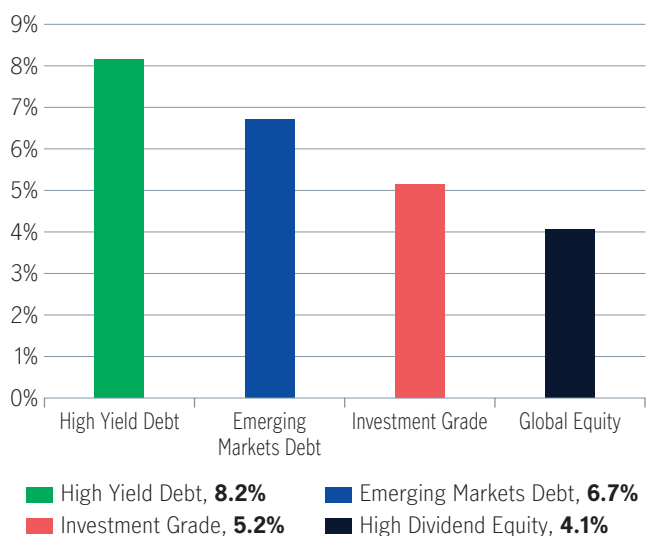

What are the sources of higher income? Let's explore the possibilities!

While bank deposit (cash) rates may not be high enough to beat inflation, these investment options might help raise the income of your portfolio:

Traditional income sources include:

- Corporate bonds (investment grade and high yield) which can add value in terms of yield and spread opportunities.¹
- Emerging market debt can provide higher yield and diversification benefits across the globe and capital market spectrum.
- Higher dividend equities can provide stable dividend income to weather market downturns and may even have dividend growth rates that outpace the inflation rate.

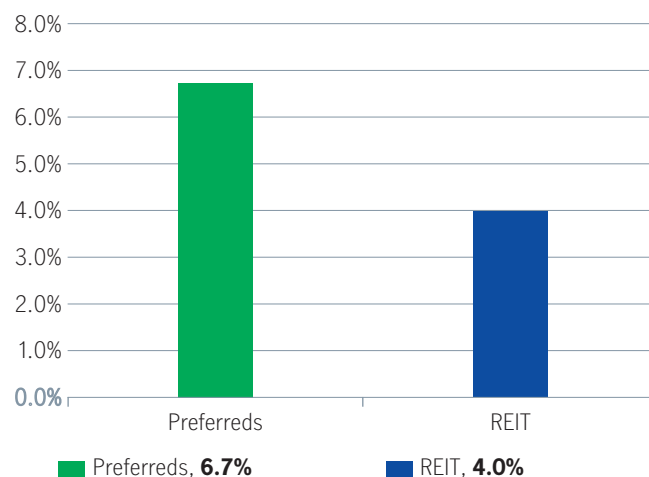

Effective yields of traditional income sources²

Non-traditional income sources include:

- Preferred securities which offer decent yield yet hold average credit ratings of investment grade bonds.
- Real Estate Investment Trusts (“REITs”) provide reliable dividend income while providing an element of inflation protection.

Effective yields of non-traditional income sources²

¹ Manulife Investment Management, Multi-Assets: Opportunities await as global rates take new turns, 17 January 2023.

² Source: ICE Data Indices, LLC, Bloomberg as of April 28, 2023. Effective yield adjusts for call options as if exercised. High Yield Debt represented by ICE BofA US High Yield Index, Emerging Markets Debt represented by ICE BofA Emerging Markets Corporate Plus Index, Investment grade represented by ICE BofA US Corporate Index, Preferred Securities represented by ICE BofAML US All Capital Securities Index, High Dividend Equity represented by MSCI ACWI High Dividend Yield Index as of 31 March, 2023, REIT represented by MSCI ACWI REITs as of 31 March, 2023.

Options abound for higher income

Nowadays, there are non-traditional income sources that can provide dual functions of both downside protection and higher income.

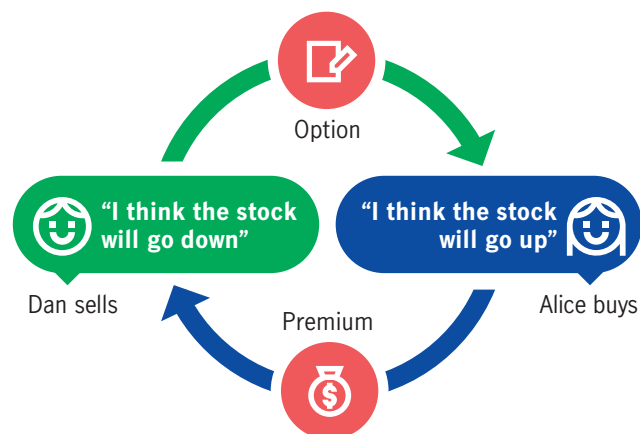

Have you heard of option strategies? Selling options (also known as option writing) is an investment strategy that can meet these two objectives. It includes using options (the right to buy or sell an asset) to help enhance a portfolio's yield. Not only can you earn dividends from the underlying asset but you can also receive premium payments from the options as income.³ They can even lower downside risk too!

While option strategies are not without risk, the premiums collected can provide a buffer of protection against return drawdowns. In many ways, options have risk and income profiles akin to high-yield bonds while providing diversification benefits away from traditional income assets and reducing overall portfolio volatility. For experienced investment managers, they can have multiple combinations of both call and put option strategies at the same time.

How do options really work? Here are two people with opposite views of the market:

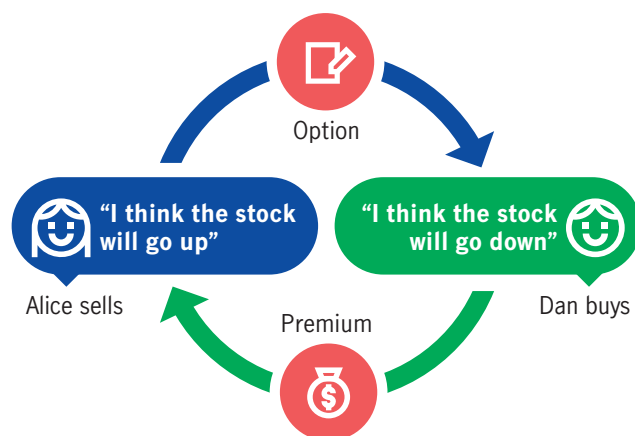

Seller's bearish stock view

Dan thinks the price of stock A (currently $8) will go down. He sells the "right to buy" stock A at $10 (call options) because he expects stock A will drop in the future. Alice thinks the opposite (stock A will rise to $15) so she buys the call options from Dan.

Seller's bullish stock view

Alice thinks the price of stock B (currently $10) will go up. She sells the "right to sell" stock B at $12 (put options) because she expects stock B will rise higher in the future. Dan thinks the opposite (stock B will decline to $8) so he buys the put options from Alice.

For illustrative purposes only.

³ The two commonly used strategies are "covered call" or "put writing": By selling (writing) a "covered call", you receive the call option premium while holding the stock at the same time. If the share price declines, the chances are that the call option won't be exercised. You get to keep the stock you're holding and the option premium as well. When writing a put, if the stock price rises, the chances are that the put option won't be exercised. You get to keep the option premium and cash you're holding as well.

Conclusion

In current times, stay invested in assets that can deliver higher income. Simply leaving your cash to earn bank deposit rates may not be enough. Inflation continues to persistently erode your purchasing power and may even devalue your retirement savings. Be proactive in exploring options to boost your income before it's too late!

You may be interested in:

<https://www.manulifefunds.com.hk/en/insights/wealthstyles-income-series-episode-1.html>

<https://www.manulifefunds.com.hk/en/insights/wealthstyles-income-series-episode-2.html>

<https://www.manulifefunds.com.hk/en/insights/wealthstyles-income-series-episode-3.html>

Manulife Investment Management is the global wealth and asset management segment of Manulife Financial Corporation. This material, intended for the exclusive use by the recipients who are allowable to receive this document under the applicable laws and regulations of the relevant jurisdictions, was produced by and the opinions expressed are those of Manulife Investment Management as of the date of writing and are subject to change. The information and/or analysis contained in this material have been compiled or arrived at from sources believed to be reliable but Manulife Investment Management does not make any representation as to their accuracy, correctness, usefulness or completeness and does not accept liability for any loss arising from the use hereof or the information and/or analysis contained herein. Information about the portfolio's holdings, asset allocation, or country diversification is historical and is not an indication of future portfolio composition, which will vary. Neither Manulife Investment Management or its affiliates, nor any of their directors, officers or employees shall assume any liability or responsibility for any direct or indirect loss or damage or any other consequence of any person acting or not acting in reliance on the information contained herein.

The information in this material may contain projections or other forward-looking statements regarding future events, targets, management discipline or other expectations, and is only as current as of the date indicated. There is no assurance that such events will occur, and may be significantly different than that shown here. The information in this material including statements concerning financial market trends, are based on current market conditions, which will fluctuate and may be superseded by subsequent market events or for other reasons. This material was prepared solely for informational purposes and does not constitute a recommendation, professional advice, an offer, solicitation or an invitation by or on behalf of Manulife Investment Management to any person to buy or sell any security. This material should not be viewed as a current or past recommendation or a solicitation of an offer to buy or sell any investment products or to adopt any investment strategy. Nothing in this material constitutes investment, legal, accounting or tax advice, or a representation that any investment or strategy is suitable or appropriate to your individual circumstances, or otherwise constitutes a personal recommendation to you. Past performance is not an indication of future results.

Investment involves risk. Investors should not base on this material alone to make investment decisions and should read the offering document (if applicable) for details, including the risk factors, charges and features of any investment products.

Proprietary Information – Please note that this material must not be wholly or partially reproduced, distributed, circulated, disseminated, published or disclosed, in any form and for any purpose, to any third party without prior approval from Manulife Investment Management.

This material is issued by Manulife Investment Management (Hong Kong) Limited.

This material has not been reviewed by the Securities and Futures Commission (SFC).